Matt and Stacy are twins. They are my classmates and good friends. I often play basketball with Matt after school. Matt is really good at playing basketball because he practices it for at least one hour every day. He is also much taller than me. I can't play basketball as well as he does. Stacy doesn't play basketball with us. Actually, she doesn't like sports at all. But Stacy is good at painting. She always paints carefully and beautifully. Sometimes she just sits somewhere near us when we are playing basketball, and paints quietly for hours. It's hard for Matt and I to paint as well as she does. I am really bad at painting. I even paint more poorly than Matt. But we have one thing in common: we all love shopping. Stacy and I like to buy pretty skirts and dresses, and Matt likes to buy shoes.

Lily has some trouble with her feet. One of Lily's feet is bigger than the other one. So, it was hard to find the right shoes. Her friend, Sally, found a good shoemaker in town. She told Lily about it. One day, Lily went to the shoemaker's store for a new pair of shoes.

It was an old store. Lily was surprised when she saw the shoemaker's gray hair, and asked, "Why are you still making shoes at your age?" He answered, "I want to help people like you. There is no way for people to change their bodies, but they can change their shoes. They need a pair of comfortable shoes, but they can't make them by themselves." Then, Lily told the shoemaker about her problem. He promised to give her a pair of shoes in her size in two weeks.

Two weeks later, Lily went to the store to get her new shoes. The shoes fit her well, and she was really happy about it. She said, "Thank you! I want to help others like you one day."
